GENERAL ALUMNI CATALOGUE

OF THE

NEW YORK LAW SCHOOL

1916

COMPILED FOR THE
NEW YORK LAW SCHOOL
UNDER THE DIRECTION OF
W. J. MAXWELL

GENERAL STATEMENT

The NEW YORK LAW SCHOOL was originally incorporated in June, 1891, under the laws of the State of New York, and opened its first annual session on the first day of the following October. It has been the aim and purpose of its founders to promote the cause of sound legal learning by pursuing and developing what is believed to be the best method of legal instruction—the method which receives its name from the distinguished instructor, Professor Theodore W. Dwight, by whom it was adopted and maintained during his long career as a teacher of law in New York City. The experience of many years has proved its great and permanent value. Thousands of lawyers were trained under it at Columbia College Law School, while that school was under the administration of Professor Dwight (1858-1891), and have tested the training there received in the practical affairs of life. Their testimony is overwhelming in its favor, whether they are graduates of the earlier or of the later years in the history of that school, while this method was there pursued. Not a few of them have risen to eminence at the bar and on the bench, and gratefully attribute their success and renown, in great measure, to their legal education under the “Dwight method.” When, therefore, Professor Dwight, together with his associates who had pursued this method, retired in 1891 from the Columbia School, the New York Law School was established, with these associates as its faculty, in order to perpetuate this system of legal training and enhance, if possible, the great distinction it had already won. The nature and principles of this method will be hereafter explained.

The Evening Department was opened in October, 1894, for the convenience of students who are so occupied from day to day that they cannot attend day sessions.

The course of study in this Law School is planned with the view of giving to the students a thorough and systematic knowledge of law in its different branches, and of developing their powers to comprehend and to apply legal principles. It will afford to students who intend to apply for admission to the bar in New York, or in other States, instruction in subjects in which they must be prepared in order to qualify them for such admission.
