

2-4-2010

Business Method Patents: The Next Endangered Species

New York Law School

Institute for INFORMATION LAW & POLICY
at New York Law School

Business Method Patents: The Next Endangered Species?

The digital explosion resurrected business method patents, but they have recently been challenged in In re Bilski. Many criticize these patents as being obvious because they are simply old methods of doing business that are now being done on the Internet. Just how broadly should patentable subject matter be interpreted? Could the Supreme Court put an end to business method patents once and for all?

Please join IILP and invited guest speaker, Manny Schechter, to discuss the implications of the Supreme Court's impending decision of In re Bilski, and the state of business method patents. Students will have the opportunity to engage in discussion with Mr. Schechter regarding Bilski and other corporate IP practice issues.

Thursday, February 4, 2010
6:00 p.m.—7:30 p.m.
W302

Manny Schechter is Chief Patent Counsel and Managing Attorney, Intellectual Property Law, at IBM. In this role, Mr. Schechter leads IBM's worldwide intellectual property law organization on patent, budget, and personnel matters and advises on intellectual property legislation, strategy, and policy.

If you are interested in attending, RSVP to Naomi Allen at naomi.allen@nyls.edu.