Copyfraud and Other Abuses of Intellectual Property Law by Jason Mazzone

New York Law School

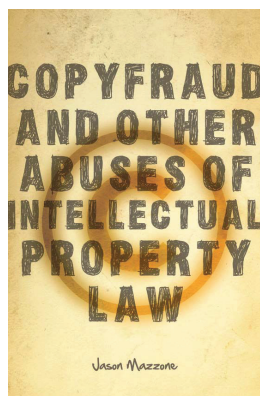

presents:

Copyfraud and Other Abuses of Intellectual Property Law by Jason Mazzone

Tuesday, November 1, 2011

6:00 p.m.—8:00 p.m.

W201 (185 West Broadway)

Copyfraud is asserting false claims of copyright to control works not in one's legal domain. Overreaching claims are a distinct problem in intellectual property; publishers, artists, producers, and others claim rights that are stronger than the law allows, thereby abusing intellectual property rights and misinforming the public.

Join Brooklyn Law School Professor Jason Mazzone as he talks about his new book, Copyfraud and Other Abuses of Intellectual Property Law, and discusses the depth of this issue and proposals on how to solve it. Books will be available for purchase at the event.
