AUTHORS OF THE FEDERALIST

HAMILTON JAY MADISON

During the winter of 1787-88, three men launched a campaign to gain New York State support for ratification of a Constitution for the new United States. Alexander Hamilton, John Jay and James Madison, who resided within a short walk of one another, agreed to share writing responsibilities and among them produced 85 articles for publication in New York newspapers under the pen name "Publius". Known as The Federalist, these essays not only aided in the Constitution's ratification, but also provide significant insight into its meaning.

Hamilton's law office and home were located on this site.

Jay lived at Exchange Place and Broadway. Madison, a Virginian, lived in a boarding house on Maiden Lane near Liberty Street while attending sessions of the Confederation Congress.

Phyllis Skloot Bamberger Room 531 U.S. Courthouse Foly Square New York, NY 10007

Dear Ms. Bamberger:

Enclosed please find my essay on New York that you requested. I have been in and out of town delivering papers on the Constitution and thus the delay in getting the essay to you.

After I talked with you on the telephone, I talked to the publisher of the volume of essays on the states. He and I are interested in publishing the New York essay as a separate pamphlet. As I had mentioned to you in our conversation, the original plan called for the publication of the book with a simultaneous publication of pamphlet editions of each essay if there was a demand for the latter. In essence, we are now thinking of merely an altered schedule of publication for the New York pamphlet edition. This scheduling change is being discussed because we have not yet received the manuscript copies of the thirteen essays from Patrick Conley. We have been asking for these manuscripts for almost a year, consequently we honestly don't know when (or even if) the book of essays will be published.

The publisher of the book would like to have your response to the New York essay. If you respond favorably, and if your organization and the New York Bicentennial Commission agree to purchase a quantity of the pamphlets, the publisher will print the New York pamphlet immediately.

The pamphlet would cost between $1-$2 each depending on the quantity ordered. (The quantity ordered will have a significant influence on the press run, which in turn determines the unit price of the pamphlet.) The publisher's most serious worry about the early publication of the pamphlet is that the pamphlet edition might adversely affect the sales of the book in New York. Whether there would be a significant relationship is uncertain. In any case, the early publication of the New York pamphlet depends on the response both you and Steve Schechter give to the

Sponsored by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the University of Wisconsin–Madison pamphlet itself and your potential orders. Finished pamphlets could be available within two to three months.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

John P. Kaminski
