A book party to celebrate the publication of In Search of Jefferson's Moose by David G. Post

Who governs the Internet, and how? What kind of law does it have, what kind of law should it have, and who will make that law? David G. Post will be discussing these questions and more, as well as his new book, In Search of Jefferson's Moose: Notes on the State of Cyberspace (Oxford, 2009), which looks at these questions through Jefferson's eyes—recreating Jefferson's encyclopedia of the New World from Notes on the State of Virginia (1786)—but this time for cyberspace.

March 11, 2009

4:00 p.m.—5:00 p.m.

40 Worth Street (enter at 220 Church St.)

David G. Post is currently the I. Herman Stern Professor of Law at the Beasley School of Law at Temple University, where he teaches intellectual property law and the law of cyberspace. Professor Post is also a Fellow at the Institute for Information Law & Policy at New York Law School. Prior to joining the faculty at Temple University, he served as a clerk for Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, and then spent six years at the law firm of Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr LLP practicing in the areas of intellectual property law and high technology commercial transactions. In addition to being a contributor to the Volokh Conspiracy blog, he has been a columnist for the American Lawyer and InformationWeek, and is the author of numerous scholarly articles on intellectual property, the law of cyberspace, and complexity theory. Professor Post has been a commentator on PBS's The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer, Court TV's Supreme Court Preview, NPR's All Things Considered, BBC's World, and featured in the PBS documentary, The Supreme Court. His writings can be accessed online at <http://www.davidpost.com> and <http://jeffersonsmoose.org>.
