The Alumni Dinner was attended by a record breaking audience.

Alumni Dinner Smashing Success

The events of the Alumni Dinner of the Alumni Association unfolded smoothly on the evening of November 21st at the Waldorf Astoria. The occasion was well attended, with more than 400 guests present.

Sylvia D. Garland '60, Chairperson of the Annual Alumni Dinner, presided over the ceremonies. Lieutenant Governor Mario M. Cuomo, key speaker, addressed the audience on the professional obligations of lawyers. He encouraged lawyers, in particular, to become involved in the issues regarding their profession, their community, and their city. Following the speech, Dean E. Donald Shapiro awarded the Dean's Medal to Mr. Cuomo for his outstanding accomplishments as an attorney and as a public servant.

The Hon. William Kapelman '40, commented that "1978 has been a 'good year' for the Association. We have moved forward in a number of important areas. For the first time in the history of the Association, three students of the Law School will sit on the Board of Directors as full voting members. In addition, the first Alumni Directory to be published since 1916 will be available in early 1979."

Six Classes celebrated important Reunions: Class of '28, Chairman, Murray B. Trayman; Class of '38, Co-chairman, Murray T. Koven and David A. Ferdinand; Class of '53, Chairman, John F. Brady; Class of '58, Co-chairman, Prof. Jackie

Kleiner and Hon. Ernst H. Rosenberger; Class of '68, Chairman, Edward V. Filardi; Class of '73, Chairmen, Carmen J. Coggnetta, Jr., Lorin Duckman, and Comm'r Alton R. Waldon, Jr.

In the closing remarks of the evening, Dr. John V. Thornton, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, noted the great progress of the Law School and applauded the supportive and enthusiastic role of the Alumni Association.

Kapelman Cites Solid Progress in '78

"1978 has been 'a banner year' for many reasons. In an effort to institute better communications between the Alumni Association and the student body, the By-Laws of the Association were recently changed so that three (3) members of the New York Law School student body will serve as full voting members of the Alumni Association Board of Directors. Of the three students, one is to be President of the Student Bar Association. The overall requirements specify that two of the three students shall be day-time students and one student shall be an individual enrolled in the evening division. These three students will commence their duties in January, 1979.

To date, fifteen New York Law School students have received loans of $400.00 from the Max Reich/Aaron Frank Loan Fund. These funds were donated by the Class of 1925 and the Class of 1929, respectively. A student with special needs may apply for these loans to the Office of Financial Aid. It was felt that professional guidance is required so that the most equitable decisions can be made regarding the use of these funds. The recipients of these grants are required to repay them in full in two years' time. It is our hope that in this way, students for years to come may benefit from this special loan fund.

In the area of placement, over 350 'job orders' from alumni have been placed with the Office of Career Counseling and Placement here at the Law School. It is essential for New York Law School graduates to look to their own alma mater for young legal talent. It is my hope that through the efforts of the Placement Office, we shall also be able to offer a much broader range of services to the graduates of the Law School who have been out for periods of five years or longer.

The first Alumni Directory to be published since 1916 is moving quickly to fruition. Although we have encountered a number of sizeable obstacles, it is my belief that this Directory will be a source of pride to our alumni as well as a real service. Soon, it will be possible for a New York Law School graduate located in California to refer a case to a New York Law School graduate in Phoenix, if one so chooses. The availability of this kind of information will certainly make our alumni feel much more in tune with one another.

Perhaps, the best news of all is the fact that last year the Alumni contributed 25% of all the scholarship monies. What that means in actual assistance is that 159 New York Law School students received grants ranging in size from $300 to full tuition scholarships. It is my earnest hope that the $54,700 donated by alumni for that purpose will be more than doubled with this year's Annual Fund.

It is important to note that all of the Alumni Association events for the year 1978 have all enjoyed record-breaking turn-outs. This includes: The Annual Luncheon, Dean's Day, the July after the Bar cocktail party for the June graduating class, and the Annual Dinner. Part of the success of these events is the ability of the Association to be able to afford to subsidize the cost of these events for recent graduates and for members of the student body. Paying your dues to the Alumni Association is the best way to assist these young attorneys."

Hon. William Kapelman '40, President of the Alumni Association.

The By-Laws of the New York Law School Alumni Association are available for study and review in the Office of the Alumni Association in Room 602, New York Law School, 57 Worth Street, New York, New York 10013.

Application to mail at Second Class Rate is pending at New York, New York and at additional Post Offices.

Placement On The Move

Panelists listen to Jay W. Waks discuss labor law.

Credit: Terry Krueger

Five guest speakers of the "Legal Lifestyles" discussion, sponsored by the Office of Career Counseling and Placement, were introduced by Frances Friedman, Esq., Placement Consultant to NYLS. This panel discussion, held at NYLS, November 16th, acquainted students with diverse types of legal employment.

Barry J. Brett, an attorney with Parker, Chapin, Flattau & Klimpl, discussed anti-trust work. He feels this is "one of the most fluid, constantly changing areas of the law." The issues are exciting and vital. Anti-trust lawyers must be knowledgeable in economics since they work closely with economists.

Jay W. Waks, who works for Kaye, Scholer, Fierman, Hays & Handler, talked about labor law. He stated that the goal of this crisis-oriented field is to attain peaceful labor relations. Attorneys give advice on the prevention of labor strife, prepare campaign literature, and negotiate contracts. Work is often performed under pressured situations so one must learn to function under stress.

Ronald S. Schacht, an attorney with Proskauer, Rose, Goetz & Mendelsohn spoke on the topic of tax law. He finds his work diverse and engaging. His responsibilities include negotiating business transactions, planning estates and, attempting to reduce tax liability. It is a constantly changing field where advice quickly becomes outdated.

Stanley M. Grossman, a member of the firm of Pomerantz, Levy, Haudek & Block explained the work of a litigator. He is primarily involved in class action suits, where one individual represents a group of people who have the same claim. Litigation is a complex and demanding enterprise.

John S. Baerst, from Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, explained his work as a corporate lawyer. He finds this area challenging and exciting.

All the panelists spoke highly of their areas of expertise. Although their work is often arduous, they are committed to their profession and they find it rewarding.

John S. Baerst explains the work of a corporate lawyer.

Profiles: Women In Corporations

Linda N. Cassano '73

Linda N. Cassano, Class of 1973, is a litigator in the Law Department of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. Prior to her present position, she had been the first woman Assistant Investigative Attorney in their Compliance Department. As Investigative Attorney, a position unique in the securities industry, Ms. Cassano was "a legal trouble shooter" dealing with governmental and securities self-regulatory agencies and their investigations and proceedings against Merrill Lynch.

Ms. Cassano believes corporations are increasing their in-house counsel for financial reasons, although the move has been a gradual one. Since corporations want to attract high caliber lawyers, salaries have been substantially raised to the point where they are competitive with many of the Wall Street firms. Attorneys are now choosing to join corporations rather than law firms.

When attending New York Law School, Ms. Cassano was a member of the Faculty Student Alumni Committee. Chairperson of Moot Court at NYLS from 1972-73, she was the first woman to hold this position. She enjoyed Moot Court, though it was time-consuming. Trained as a public speaker, she attended Manhattanville College partially on oratory scholarships. In high school, Ms. Cassano won a National Oratorical Championship. At the age of sixteen, she was keynote speaker at the American Legion Memorial Day Service on Wall Street.

When Ms. Cassano graduated, NYLS posted her resume along with other outstanding students' resumes in the New York Law Journal. She accepted an offer from an insurance related corporation. This corporation was clearly looking for a woman to fill its quota. Working for this corporation for two years, she received good experience in drafting contracts and dealing with government regulators. She also became astute in corporate politics. In addition, Ms. Cassano established a private practice. She enjoyed the direct client contact. Finally, immediately before working for Merrill Lynch, Ms. Cassano was employed by the New York Stock Exchange, Inc. as an Enforcement Attorney in the Regulation and Surveillance Division.

Ms. Cassano commented that "The Law School Administration, from its inception, has been a team of professionals with great ambitions for New York Law School." With regard to the Alumni Association: "It's alive. Lucille Hillman and her staff project an excellent image for the Law School." Ms. Cassano feels that her Class had been instrumental in the change of administration in 1973, of which she is proud.

Audrey King '72

Audrey King, a '72 graduate of New York Law School, is Director of Consumer Affairs for GAF Corporation, a multinational conglomerate. Ms. King feels that corporations offer talented men and women the opportunity to participate in exciting work. She advises students to be ambitious and well-prepared in order to compete for interesting and exciting careers. The work is hard and the hours can be long, but the rewards are well worth the efforts.

Prior to attending Law School, Ms. King had a successful career in advertising and public relations. This background, together with work during Law School as a summer intern in the State Attorney General's Office, a project with the U.S. Attorney's Office, and clerking for a law firm, provided an excellent background for her later involvement in business.

Following graduation Ms. King joined the legal staff of the Sperry Rand Corporation. After a few years with this company, she felt that she would like to work in an area that was more consumer product oriented. She then accepted the position of Senior Attorney at GAF Corporation. At that time, the company had a relatively small legal department, and her range of experience included negotiating and drafting commercial contracts, real estate transactions, and counseling on aspects of marketing and business.

When GAF asked her to establish a new department that would be responsible for consumer affairs, she eagerly accepted. She feels that corporations do not discriminate against professional women. "Women have to prove themselves and achieve in the same way that men do."

During a typical day at GAF, Ms. King might discuss new product concepts, review consumer research, review marketing policy, approve product publicity and advertising, and create policy for resolving consumer problems. She maintains an overview of all company business.

Ms. King is a member of the Board of Directors for the Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals in Business. This is the nation's leading organization for consumer specialists. It provides opportunities for the exchange of ideas and offers programs for training new entrants into the field. She has lectured on warranties and government regulations for the Society.

Ms. King is listed in Who's Who of American Women and is active in the work of many business organizations, including Manufacturing Chemists Association and National Association of Manufacturers.

Through the efforts and enthusiasm of Assistant Dean Lucille M. Hillman, Ms. King became involved in Alumni Association activities. This year she spoke at the orientation for new students and at a panel discussion (see page 8). She believes that Dean E. Donald Shapiro has made the alumni proud of the School and that he has been instrumental in creating an outstanding faculty at NYLS. Ms. King concludes that she had a superb legal education at New York Law School.

R. Ellen Patti-Avellino '76

R. Ellen Patti-Avellino, Class of '76, is a commercial finance attorney in the legal department of International Paper Company (IPC). Her responsibilities include: negotiation and preparation of all types of personal property leasing contracts, including true, financial operating, full pay-out, non pay-out, tax and leveraged leases and security agreements; supervising, monitoring and coordinating litigation; and monitoring Federal and state governmental regulation of leasing and finance. Equipment leasing is a relatively new field of business and law.

She developed her expertise in commercial finance work while employed at Litton Industries. At Law School, Ms. Patti-Avellino concentrated her studies in the area of commercial/finance law. She applies her knowledge obtained from her corporate, contract, agency, tax, secured transactions, sales, and bankruptcy courses daily. Clearly, Ms. Patti-Avellino feels she "received a solid legal education from NYLS."

The legal department of IPC is a place where one can aspire to General Counsel or to administrative positions. IPC's philosophy is, a good lawyer is a good business person as well. According to Ms. Patti-Avellino, this may not be the case in many corporations.

Ms. Patti-Avellino believes corporate law departments are expanding for a number of reasons. Corporations have found it is important to have in-house attorneys who are immediately accessible to the business staff. Corporations broaden their attorney staff in order to cut spiraling costs and to meet the burden of government regulation.

From an attorney's point of view, there are substantial benefits for employees of corporations. The salaries are comparable to law firms, and the benefits, in terms of medical and dental family plans and insurance policies, are excellent. Professionally, corporations allow lawyers to specialize in an area of the law and to gain sound knowledge of the business of the corporation.

Ms. Patti-Avellino is closely associated with the New York Women's Bar Association. She serves as a member of the Associations Board of Directors and is Chairperson of the New Lawyers' Committee which hosts practical legal education seminars covering areas of the law which interest new attorneys.

Ms. Patti-Avellino continues her legal education through symposiums and seminars. She tries to keep informed about the changes in her field.

Ms. Patti-Avellino is a member of the second generation of Pattis' to attend NYLS. Her father, Clement S. Patti, received a Juris Doctor from New York Law School in 1941. Palma B. Patti, her sister, and Clement S. Patti, Jr., her brother, are students at NYLS. Palma Patti has recently been elected Secretary of the Student Bar Association.

Fortune 500 Panel Discussion

Credit: Terry Krueger

"What is it like to work in a Fortune 500 Corporation as a Lawyer?" This question was the subject of discussion by students and panelists on November 13th at NYLS. Sponsored by the Office of Career Counseling and Placement, three NYLS graduates offered insight into corporate working environments.

Audrey King '72, Director of Consumer Affairs, GAF Corporation, commented that salaries for lawyers in corporations compete with those in law firms. Opportunities exist for movement within the company as well as outside it. "Is there discrimination against women?" No, there is no time to discriminate against talented women who have proved their capabilities. Ms. King recommended looking for a corporate position after one has secured experience in a smaller business or in a government job.

Mr. Richard A. Shepard '73, Manager of Real Estate Administration for GAF, advised students to research corporations before interviewing for a position. The interviewer will know that the applicant is interested enough to take the time to investigate the company and to come prepared with comments. He suggested "plugging away" for jobs only when it is clear that openings are available. Ms. King reminded students that lawyers have the flexibility to interview for positions other than those traditionally filled by attorneys.

Paul A. Seader '72, Vice President in the International Law Division of the Chase Manhattan Bank, indicated that corporate law is a growing field. He informed the audience that an LL.M. is highly regarded in the banking world, and that other fields share this view of the degree.

Mr. Seader stressed that there is a time and a place for legal jargon. People prefer to read memoranda written in standard English rather than Legal Latin. He reassured everyone that law is not a "humorless profession".

All the panelists agreed that impressive career opportunities in corporations await lawyers. To be successful in these positions, as in law school, one must be willing to do one's homework.

The discussion was followed by a wine and cheese party to allow students and panelists to meet informally.

Faculty Notes

Associate Dean Margaret S. Bearn was presented on November 30th, the President's Award by the Chamber-Canal Civil Association, Inc. for her meritorious service. Associate Dean Bearn is the Secretary of the Association.

Professor Jeffrey E. Glen spoke at a symposium sponsored by the Brooklyn Law Review at Brooklyn Law School on December 9th. Professor Glen discussed a procedural case recently decided in the Supreme Court. His lecture was entitled "A Shaffer v. Heitner Analysis of 'Mere Presence' and Other Traditional Bases of Personal Jurisdiction."

Professor Lee L. Holzman has been promoted to the position of Chief Law Assistant to the Bronx County Surrogate's Court by Judge Bertram R. Gelfand. Professor Holzman had been the Law Secretary to Judge Gelfand.

Professor W. Bernard Richland, former Corporation Counsel of the City of New York and present counsel to the firm of Botein, Hays, Sklar & Herzberg, is author of the article "Addicts, Alcoholics and Civil Rights" (N.Y.L.J., November 24, 1978). The article looks at the implications of federal court decisions on employment practices and unlawful racial discrimination. Professor Richland indicates that alcoholics and heroin addicts in methadone programs may be victims of unlawful discrimination.

Dean E. Donald Shapiro has written an article entitled "Medical Malpractice: History, Diagnosis and Prognosis" for the Saint Louis University Law Journal, Vol. 22, No. 3, 1978. Dean Shapiro and Professor Curran are authors of the case book entitled "Law Medicine and Forensic Science." This case book has been adopted by fifty-five institutions of higher learning.

Professor Otto L. Walter

Professor Otto L. Walter has recently been appointed editor of a German periodical entitled Taxes & Economics. In October, he attended the German Tax Society Meeting where he discussed German/American tax problems of partnerships.

Our library is continuously seeking to expand its collection for the benefit of our Law School community. Donations of law books and periodicals are appreciated, and if accepted are tax deductible.

Volunteers Needed For February Phonathon

Dean E. Donald Shapiro & Professor Anthony Davis Discuss Court Conditions

The New York County Lawyers' Association, one of the largest local bar associations in the country, accused the City of New York of inflicting "unbearable, dehumanizing conditions" upon defendants in the Manhattan branch of the Criminal Court. Dean E. Donald Shapiro, Chairman of the Association's Penal and Correctional Reform Committee, Professor Anthony Davis of NYLS, Chairman of a subcommittee which drafted the report, and Lawrence Cusack, President of the Association, discussed the findings of the report.

The report provides recommendations to alleviate the allegedly deplorable conditions in the court building. The reaction of the City in the past has been an acknowledgement of the conditions but a lack of money to remedy them.

Enthusiastic volunteers sparked last year's phonathon. Ronda Lustman '72, enjoys a light moment while speaking to a fellow graduate.

Robert V. Gaulin '76, diligently pursues his requests for contributions to the Law School.
