This year's issue of CAVEAT EMPTOR is only the third since New York Law School has had a yearbook.

We hope that we have been successful in capturing some of the more inspirational moments as well as trigger some happy memories both now as you look through this book as well as in years from now when this book is taken down from some shelf or found in an attic.

1987 is a significant year. Ours is the 95th graduating class from New York Law School, only 5 years short of the 100th graduating class milestone. Additionally, 1987 marks the 200th birthday of the Constitution of this great country of ours.

This yearbook is proudly dedicated to the bicentennial of the Constitution of the United States and to those people who worked to make this country what it is.
June 1987

To the Class of '87:

Your years at New York Law School have been a time of dramatic growth for us as an institution. I hope that this has been a time of significant intellectual and personal growth for you as well.

I am confident that you have received an excellent legal education at the Law School. You are now prepared to test your knowledge and skills as practicing attorneys. As your legal careers progress, I hope that you will keep in mind our goal at the Law School not only to train lawyers for the practice of law, but also to train leaders for the improvement of our society.

Speaking for the entire New York Law School community, I extend our very best wishes to you for the future,

James F. Simon
Dean

The NYLS Asian American Law Students Association (AALSA) was formed to enable Asian American law students to take unified action on issues in law schools and the Asian American community.

A major objective of AALSA is to increase Asian American presence at NYLS and other law schools, and in the legal profession as a whole, in order to serve the interests of the Asian American community. AALSA organizes activities and programs relating to Asian legal, economic, political and cultural issues to promote a deeper understanding of the role and status of Asians in America.
Association of International Law Students

The Association is a student organization established to provide a supportive environment to international students and those interested in the international community and international law.

As a group, we feel a shared purpose in the investigation into other legal systems in search of a better understanding of the function of law in the social and international community process.

Black and Latino Law Students Association

BALLSA was organized in 1976 by black law students to articulate and promote the professional needs and goals of black and Latino law students and others traditionally excluded from the American legal system; to foster and encourage professional competence; to focus upon the relationship of the minority attorney to the American legal structure; to instill in the attorney and the law student a greater awareness of a commitment to the needs of the minority communities and to influence American law schools, legal fraternities and associations to use their expertise and social prestige to bring about change within the legal system in order to make it responsive to the needs of minority communities. The New York Law School chapter of BALLSA is one of 115 law school chapters affiliated with the national organization.

Environmental Law Project

The Environmental Law Society recognizes that a present, acute danger exists to life and the quality of living on the Earth, due to the stresses placed on the ecosystem by man. The group believes that it is everyone's moral obligation to aid in the preservation and enhancement of life for all members of that system.

There exists a developed body of law, the aim of which is to protect the environment. It is the group's purpose to: (1) provide the community with legal, scientific, and social information concerning relevant environmental concerns; (2) train members of the Society in environmental advocacy; (3) provide support to lawyers and organizations engaged in environmental litigation.

Human Rights

Human Rights is a publication of the American Bar Association Section of Individual Rights and Responsibilities. Edited by a New York Law School student staff, the publication presents articles of current interest in the field of human rights law.

Candidates for staff positions on Human Rights and Human Rights Annual are selected each year on the basis of academic performance and through a writing competition open to all students. Both publications promote the preservation and extension of human rights.

International Law Society

The International Law Society provides a forum for leading practitioners and scholars of international law — sponsoring activities such as symposia on current international legal issues and regional meetings of international law associations. The Society also sponsors the New York Law School team which competes in the national Philip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition.
The New York Law School Journal of International and Comparative Law is published three times a year by the School and is edited by students chosen for membership on the basis of scholastic performance and demonstrated legal writing ability. The Journal publishes material written by both students and legal scholars.

Judicial Board

The Judicial Board of the Student Bar Association provides a forum for the settlement of disputes between students and other students or organizations or between two or more organizations. The New York Law School Law Review is published quarterly by the school and edited by students chosen on the basis of scholastic performance and through a writing competition. It contains articles and book reviews by legal scholars and notes on legal developments and recent cases written by the student editors. Because of the exacting nature of the work and the diversity of the experience it provides, the Law Review is an important part of the educational program of the School. Selection as an editor of the Law Review constitutes one of the highest undergraduate honors.
Legal Association for Women

The Legal Association for Women seeks to involve the entire Law School community in considering the role and potential of women in the legal profession. L.A.W. believes the legal community will benefit if it enables the talents of all of its members to flourish. It urges women to seek positions of responsibility and leadership. In addition to the traditional roles of family and juvenile law, women are encouraged to move into fields such as corporate, litigation, international, and tax law. In addition to speakers and workshops sponsored by L.A.W. programs proposed for 1985-1986 include the annual symposia entitled Women and the Law Today and Women in the Law Tomorrow. The former, held during fall semester, usually focuses on substantive issues of law. The latter, held during spring semester, targets male dominated areas where women have yet to make a substantial impact. L.A.W. is affiliated with the New York Women’s Bar Association.

Lesbian and Gay Law Students Association

This group provides political, educational, and social support for gay people at the Law School. It aims to combat discrimination, provide information on educational and professional issues, and help gay students deal with entering a profession less than fully accepting.
The New York Law School Media Law Project was organized in 1979 to facilitate and expand the growing interest in the Law School Community in the field of media law. The Project seeks to promote the awareness, study and integration of entertainment, communications, copyright, patent and related media law among the Law School Community of students, faculty and alumni by providing a forum of speakers, and assisting in the publication and exchange of ideas in the field of media law.

Moot Court Board

The Moot Court Board is a student organized and operated activity designed to develop further student skills in legal research, writing and appellate advocacy, as well as to increase the understanding of appellate legal processes.

Students are given the opportunity to participate in intramural moot court competition under the supervision of the Moot Court Board. From this competition, successful candidates are invited to become members of the Board and a further selection is made of a three-person team to represent the Law School in the Regional and National Moot Court Competition. In addition, the Board sends teams to many intermural competitions held at law schools throughout the country.
The National Lawyers Guild is an association of lawyers, legal workers, and law students. Guild members represent various political perspectives, but stand united in recognizing that human rights are more sacred than property rights.

Beyond our various activities, such as bringing speakers to the School and sponsoring symposia and debates, we attempt to provide a supportive atmosphere for progressive students. We understand that it is difficult to study law in New York, when in recent times the government in Washington has shown such a callous disregard for legal traditions, particularly in the fields of civil rights, labor law and international relations.

We invite all students to work with us to utilize the law as a means toward greater social justice.

New York Law School Trial Lawyers

New York Law School Trial Lawyers, a student chapter of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, is for students interested in litigation. The chapter sponsors programs which expose students to trial advocacy techniques and methods for developing trial advocacy skills.

Phi Delta Phi is the world's largest professional legal fraternity serving the student, the Law School and the profession and dedicated to the ideas of community service. Its goal is to form a strong bond uniting students and teachers of the law with members of the Bench and Bar. The International organization offers professional programs, student loans, job preparation, job placement assistance, insurance programs, a quarterly publication, conventions, conferences, awards and lifetime friendships.

Phi Delta Phi is open to all students interested in pursuing their leadership and speaking abilities and desiring to excel in the legal profession.
The SBA consists of all the students of New York Law School. The objectives of the association are to provide an effective medium for the expression of students' views, to act as a liaison between the student body, the administration and faculty of the Law School. It also initiates and administers activities and programs designed to promote an awareness of the lawyer's responsibilities to society, the legal profession, and to his or her clients.
In 1984, a new student newspaper was established, The New York Law School Reporter. The paper covers events, news and opinions at the Law School. As one of the most active student voices in the student body, the Reporter serves as a forum of communication between the students, faculty, and the school's administration.

Urban Law Project

The Urban Law Society was founded in 1983 by a group of students who felt that, given the urban setting of New York Law School, an organization dedicated to issues affecting ban dwellers and educating such persons as to their rights under the law was needed.
The Robert F. Wagner, Sr., Memorial Moot Court Committee is student organized and operated by students educated in the labor law field. The Wagner Committee, which is sponsored by the Moot Court Board, runs a national moot court competition dealing with labor law issues. Law schools throughout the United States send teams to participate in this intermural competition. New York Law School is known for having the finest national labor competition in the country.
